

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S MESSAGE

Ibrahim-Tanko Amidu

Welcome to this edition of our newsletter. The reporting period has been an exciting one for the Foundation: we launched the Shift the Power programme, which challenges to us re-examine how development is done; we added four new projects with funding from Jacobs Foundation, Botnar Foundation and the International Organisation for Migration.

We continued to be a valued member of the civil society community in Ghana, facilitating the development and strengthening of CSO coalitions and alliances at regional and national levels for development effectiveness.

Details of these and more are provided below and in the links to our website and other platforms. We invite you to engage with us on our very own platforms. Happy reading!

Stakeholders push for more investments to improve girl's education

Speakers at a STAR-Ghana Foundation facilitated forum on improving girls' access to quality education have called for increased investments in education to improve access to education for all. The call is coming on the back of concerns around poor education outcomes for girls. Poverty and cost-related (hidden) challenges remain foremost on the list of barriers that confront girls' sustainable access to quality education and their retention and performance in school. Participants recommended that the unique needs of girls should be factored into education financing to enable girls to enroll, remain and complete their education. The forum was held under the theme 'Increasing Inclusive Access to Continuous Quality Education for Girls.' ....more

Promoting domestic resource mobilization for social development: Reflections on our experiences and lessons on what works

Domestic resource mobilisation is widely acknowledged as a sustainable strategy for the strengthening of the civil society sector and organisations and for promoting locally driven development in Africa. However there has been a general failure to tap into these resources, due to a variety of factors. In 2021, STAR-Ghana Foundation partnered the African Philanthropy Network \(APN\) under the Giving for Change project to undertake a multi-country assessment of the legal environment for giving in eight (8) countries across Africa, Asia, and North America. The assessment revealed that legal frameworks at the national level have failed to protect this right and/or do not provide an enabling environment for domestic resource mobilization and community philanthropy to thrive ....more

Violent Extremism and Border Security: STAR-Ghana Foundation builds capacity of border communities in Upper East Region

Community buy-in and support is critical to the success of efforts aimed at helping improve security and or preventing conflicts and strengthening resilience particularly in risk border communities against spillovers and infiltration of violent extremism. In Ghana, the volatile security situation in neighbouring countries to the north has heightened concerns of possible infiltration of extremists and radicalization of vulnerable demographics in border communities. To mitigate these risks, STAR-Ghana Foundation, with funding from the International Organization for Migration (IOM) in Ghana, is implementing the Community Cohesion project in six border communities in the Upper-East region which aims at reducing their susceptibility to radicalization and violent extremism.....more.

Civil society urged to adopt double-edged approach in advocacy

The Executive Director of STAR-Ghana Foundation, Ibrahim-Tanko Amidu, has urged civil society to adopt a double-edged approach in their advocacy work.

He said their work must not just focus on reporting to align with the objectives and requirements of their donors but also geared towards development effectiveness.

According to Alhaji Tanko, civil society actors often force themselves to pick up positives, where perhaps it might have been more useful for them if they focused on the challenges.....more

STAR-Ghana Foundation holds nationwide validation framework workshops for Civil Society Strengthening Project (CSSP) - Shift The Power

As calls for power shift between the global north and south in areas of development deepen, International NGOs continue to fashion out ways to prepare the south for a paradigm shift in power. In Ghana, Norsaac is modelling Participatory Grants Making (PGM) with a core country team including STAR-Ghana Foundation, Oxfam and WACSI providing support. The pro-marginalized and policy influencing organization (Norsaac), is one of two CSOs selected in Ghana to roll out prototypes aimed at providing the needed power shift. more....

Multi-stakeholder approach needed to promote girls' education

The Executive Director of STAR-GHANA Foundation, Ibrahim-Tanko Amidu, has called for a collaborative approach from all stakeholders towards the promotion of girls' education in the country.

He said the performance between boys and girls have not been the best despite efforts by the government, civil society organisations (CSOs), development partners, traditional authorities, parents, and others to improve the situation....more

Capacity Building: Writing workshop for Staff

In April, STAR-Ghana Foundation ,held a workshop, to train its staff on report writing & administrative communication. The training, which is the first for the year, among other things seeks to equip staff with the requisite skills to enable them to write good and accurate reports.

UPCOMING ACTIVITIES

Mid-term Review of GFC Programme

The The Giving for Change(GfC) Project seeks to transform how “development is done” by focusing specifically on the recognition and importance of domestic resources in increasing local ownership, unlocking agency, and strengthening communities’ ability to claim entitlements from different actors, especially government. The Project, implemented through an Alliance and covers eight countries in Africa, Asia, and South America. The project is over a 5year period and funded by the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs. STAR-Ghana Foundation is the Anchor Institution for Ghana, with WACSI as a Strategic Partner.

Oreintation for Civil Soceity Strenthening Programme(CSSP-StP)

STAR Ghana Foundation in collaboration with Africa Education Watch, SEND Ghana and Parliament’s select Committee on Education held a strategic meeting to discuss reports and surveys produced on education services delivery in Ghana. The report which captured an analysis of the 2022 national budget revealed an allocation of 12.9% to the education sector which does not meet the UNESCO threshold of 15 to 20% of public expenditure. The Ministry of Finance, Education Ministry(MoE), Ghana Education Service, National Council for Curriculum and Assessment, Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection(MoGCSP) and Scholarship Secretariat during deliberations at the meeting presents status reports and recommendations. Among the key issues, it was recommended that the Scholarship Secretariat diversify avenues for advertising scholarships to widen reach. Also, MoE and MoGCSP has been to invest in early childhood education in the public sector by building more early childhood centres/nurseries

STAR-Ghana Foundation works towards the development of a vibrant, well-informed and assertive civil society able to contribute to transformational national development and inclusive access to high quality, accountable public services for all citizens.
